

Campaign:

“With the unity of women, we build a free, democratic, decentralized Syria.”

Call for participation

Dear women, friends, comrades,

Today Syria is shaken by war and fundamentalism. Communities such as the Druze and Alawis are being targeted, and women are kidnapped. But in North and East Syria, a democratic project is being built in practice: one where every community has a place, and where women lead the struggle for freedom and justice.

This campaign was created to bring this truth to the world's attention and to show that a democratic and decentralised Syria, led by women and not shaped by foreign plans, is the path to real peace.

The slogan of the campaign is: “With the unity of women, we build a free, democratic, decentralized Syria.” We ask you to be part of it.

Because women everywhere know that patriarchy destroys societies, and that women's leadership brings life, equality, and peace. Because raising our voices together, across borders, strengthens the women of Rojava and Syria and protects their revolution. Because global solidarity makes it harder for regimes and occupying powers to silence the voices of women.

What you can do:

- The first and simplest step: Once the call goes public from Syria, make a short solidarity video (ideally with your group or your collective). Please include your name or your group's name, and the place where the video was taken (City, Country) . These videos will be published a week after the call from Syria.
- Share the campaign with your networks, inviting other women to join.
- Participate in online panels, or organize actions and events in your own area.
- If you have journalist contacts, inform them and encourage them to cover the campaign. We will provide material, and do not hesitate to ask for additional information.

If you are interested in participating, please contact us at info@kongra-star.org. We will keep you updated with all the details. You will find more information and materials here: <https://kongra-star.org/eng/campaign/>.

This campaign, initiated by Kongra Star women's movement and Zenobiya association, is built on solidarity among women everywhere. Whether you act as an individual or as part of an organization, your role is crucial.

For a democratic, decentralised Syria.

For women's and society liberation.

For peace.
